Mount Royal's Initiatives: Promoting a Deeper Understanding in Junior Level, Courses through Projects and Presentations

With the small class sizes at Mount Royal University, we have the opportunity to use teaching strategies often reserved for senior level courses at larger universities. Final projects are part of the curriculum in several of our junior level courses and in-class presentations play a role in many classes as well. We will discuss some of the specifics of what we have done and the advantages and disadvantages of these teaching strategies.
