
REBECCA MCKAY, University of New Brunswick, Saint John
Resistance to Active Learning

People new to active learning strategies and activities are often skeptical and resistant—and not only students! In this talk, I will discuss what the literature says about resistance to active learning from both perspectives: student and teacher, as well as provide examples from my own experience in undergraduate mathematics courses.