
TINA RAPKE, University of Calgary

Incorporating the practices of mathematicians into the classroom

This talk will examine how and why one might incorporate the practices of mathematicians into the classroom. I will describe a few practices of mathematicians and how they can be used to encourage student engagement in mathematics. I will discuss the implications of employing such practices for teacher education and curriculum.