
HICHEM BEN-EL-MECHAIEKH, NADIA HARDY, DRAGANA MARTINOVIC AND YVAN ST-AUBIN, Brock University

PANEL DISCUSSION: What is the mathematics we 'should' teach and the pedagogy we 'should' use in this XXIst Century?

Is our undergraduate education in sync with what is needed from us? Does/Should our undergraduate education mostly benefit future academic mathematicians to the expense of the majority of students in our undergraduate courses? Are many mathematics departments destined to become only service departments?

Are we disconnected from the XXIst Century student?