
COSTANZA PICCOLO, University of British Columbia

An intervention for students at risk of failing their first University Calculus course

In this talk I will describe an intervention aimed at providing early support to students at risk of failing their first University Calculus course. I will discuss our approach for an early identification of the "at-risk" students and describe the design and implementation of a series of optional study sessions focussed on strengthening students' self-regulatory skills.