
MIKE PAWLIUK, University of Toronto - Mississauga

Using discussion boards in university math courses, small and large

Online discussion boards serve many roles in math course: they are a place to connect, ask questions, practice mathematical communication, study, and many other things.

I will give examples of how I have integrated discussion boards into courses, and what I have learned from them. Courses include: Introduction to Proofs, Calculus (at various levels), and a graduate course for primary and secondary school teachers.