
ANDIE BURAZIN, University of Toronto Mississauga

In the middle ...

A large and growing community lives in between mathematics and mathematics education. And strong, symbiotic relationships can be created, if the three groups – mathematicians, mathematics educators, and the group “in between” work together. How do members and myself of this in between community think about themselves and their work contributing to improve and further the teaching and learning of mathematics will be discussed.