

---

BRIAN FORREST, University of Waterloo

It's ok to be wrong!!! Really!

One of the biggest obstacles for many students in learning mathematics is the fear of being "wrong". Many of our students are conditioned to believe that the sole goal in working a mathematics problem is to get "the right answer". Anything less is a failure. In this talk I will try to illustrate how I address this issue from day one in my Calculus classes and in general.