
HAZEM HASSAN, McGill University

Interaction between directed reading programs and undergraduate research projects

The Directed Reading Program offers (DRP) undergraduate students an intermediate step before jumping into more formal undergraduate research projects. I will discuss the synergy between these two types of projects, how the DRP prepares students for research projects and possible room for coordination between the two programs.