GIZEM KARAALI, Pomona College

Utilitarian and Aesthetic Goals of Mathematics (Education): A Personal Story

This talk will explore different justifications mathematics instructors give themselves and their students (as well as university administrators and policy makers) for why mathematics should be taught, intertwined with my personal evolution around the theme. I will describe a handful of courses I have taught through the years that reflect this evolution.