
JONATHAN MARTIN, University of Alberta
Curve Evolutions and Forest Fires

We present a curve expansion model for forest fire spread in a heterogeneous environment, in the form of a coupled system of hyperbolic partial differential equations. This model extends the mathematical model employed in the Canadian Forest Service's PROMETHEUS fire simulator software package. We will present the derivation of our model, then discuss some analytical results which concern fire perimeter evolutions in anisotropic and homogeneous media.