

---

STEPHANIE PORTET, Department of Mathematics, University of Manitoba

Modelling intermediate filaments

Intermediate filaments are one of the components of cytoskeletal networks that are involved in major functions in the cell. Understanding the assembly of intermediate filaments, their organization in networks and resulting mechanical properties is essential to elucidate their functions in cells. I will present computational and mathematical models of the complex processes of intermediate filament assembly and network organization.