Online Adventures: Engaging Those You Cannot See

Online resources have recent seen an explosion in both the number of such resources and their use by our students. I will discuss some of the resources that I have worked on in the past including the Math Exam Resources wiki currently housed on servers at The University of British Columbia as well as my own spinoff projects created during my time at the University of Waterloo. In particular, I will explore how I have made these online resources more engaging and possible next steps for online education.
