
DANNY DYER, Memorial University of Newfoundland

Active Learning - with proof and without

In this talk I will discuss several attempts I've made to incorporate active learning into first year calculus courses, as well as to higher level courses in discrete mathematics where the emphasis is on rigorous proof. Even in these senior courses, active learning can be used to motivate problems and to spur intuition.