
ANTHONY BONATO, Toronto Metropolitan University

The Localization Game

The Localization game models an invisible evader on a graph detectable by distance probes. The game and its corresponding optimization parameter, the localization number, have come into a renewed focus in recent years. We give a sample of recent results on the localization number for various graph families, ranging from locally finite graphs, directed graphs, and graphs arising from designs and Latin squares.