
DUSTIN CARTWRIGHT, University of Tennessee

Tree compactifications of the moduli space of genus 0 curves

The moduli space of genus zero curves with marked points has a well-known compactification, due to Deligne and Mumford. This compactification can be constructed as a closure of the moduli space of smooth curves inside a toric variety. I will talk about a broader class of compactifications which can be formed by taking closures inside other toric varieties. These compactifications are indexed by certain compatible families of trees.