
BRIAN FORREST, University of Waterloo
Lessons Learned from Teaching Online

It is a wide held belief that one of the most significant advantages of face-to-face instruction over on-line delivery is that it is much easier to foster deep understanding of the content in the former setting. In this talk I will speak about my experiences teaching a variety of classes online and about the lessons I have learned concerning student engagement. In particular, I will try to explain how these experiences have reshaped the way I approach on campus courses.