
YUE ZHAO, York University

Inverse source problems in electrodynamics

This talk concerns inverse source problems for the time-dependent Maxwell equations. The electric current density is assumed to be the product of a spatial function and a temporal function. We prove uniqueness and stability in determining the spatial or temporal function from the electric field, which is measured on a sphere or at a point over a finite time interval.